

States with Abortion Bans Receiving Fewer Applicants for Residency Programs

Health Equity

05.18.24

During the two years following the SCOTUS Dobbs decision that overturned Roe v. Wade, states with abortion bans are experiencing a waning interest from medical school graduates seeking residencies, particularly those applicants wishing to enter an OB/GYN or other residency program (e.g., family medicine) whose patients are most likely to be affected.