“What distinguishes health care from other areas of law is that most players in the space, whether providers, suppliers, or technology developers, share the same underlying objective: making care more accessible, affordable, and efficient for patients.”

David Hatch counsels providers, start-ups, technology companies, and other health care clients on an expansive range of business, transactional, and compliance issues. Dave helps clients establish and expand their operations and steers them clear of regulatory stumbling blocks that could impede their goals or threaten costly disruptions. Focusing on the issues that matter and disposing of inconsequential distractions, he facilitates timely transactions while comprehensively protecting his clients' interests.

Dave's broad transactional background includes practice integration, asset purchases, mergers and acquisitions, health care joint ventures, and health care fraud and abuse compliance. His understanding of the unique issues and challenges faced by nonprofit and tax-exempt health care providers has made him a valued partner for clients in that space. He also provides consistent and clear counsel for physicians and physician groups, laboratories, hospitals, diagnostic centers, ambulatory surgery centers, application developers and technology companies, durable medical equipment companies, mental health providers, pharmaceutical companies, and medical device and prosthetic distributors.

Dave has substantial compliance experience that plays a critical role in his business representation, whether in the context of a proposed deal or at any stage in a client's development and operational lifecycle, from start-up and formation to offerings, change of control, and dissolution events. He advises clients regarding federal and state anti-kickback laws, self-referral laws, pharmacy laws, restrictions on the delivery of drugs and medical devices, regulation of ambulatory surgery centers, and the corporate practice of medicine doctrine.

Dave's counsel arms his clients with the information they need to make informed decisions and avoid regulatory missteps. At the same time, his ability to quickly get the answers to urgent questions whenever they arise gives them confidence that their interests are well-protected.
